Robert McKenna Winter is Chair of the Litigation Practice Group at RSP and a member of the firm's Management Committee. An accomplished attorney with more than 30 years of legal experience, Bob concentrates his practice in litigation and dispute resolution strategies across several substantive areas of law including business transactions, labor and employment, personal injury, and medical malpractice.

Throughout his career, Bob has represented a diverse array of corporate, entrepreneurial, and public and private entities in complex disputes involving breach of contract, restrictive covenants, business dissolution, real estate concerns, and employment matters. He adeptly handles government regulatory issues, civil rights actions, and related claims of wrongdoing. Bob also represents individuals and families whose loved ones have fallen victim due to negligence on the part of another person or business. He has decisively won a wide range of personal injury and medical malpractice matters, bringing a unique and skilled legal approach to those practice areas.

A seasoned litigator with proven trial capabilities, Bob has successfully tackled cases in state, federal and appellate courts, administrative tribunals, arbitrations and mediations. He combines deep understanding of litigation and negotiation principles with innate persistence to aggressively advocate for his clients so that they can focus their energies on their work and personal lives.

Bob frequently acts as general counsel to private and not-for-profit companies, serving as a resource for decision makers who rely on his in-depth legal experience to provide practical insights on evolving day-to-day business issues. He serves his clients from offices located in downtown Chicago, Oaklawn, and Orland Park, Illinois.
